

Eric Fouche – Director Sales

A little about yourself:

I spent a few years as a shipping broker before starting in the construction industry about 14 years ago where I was lucky to move up the ranks exploring opportunities in Cross Border countries and putting deals together for Government and private sector. Apart from fishing being one of my hobbies, I also dabble in a little motor sport racing in the Karting Circuit and Modified Street cars.

When you joined L2B & Why?

Our group have been with L2B for over 12 years now. L2B offered a broader based understanding of the market not only locally, but cross border, and had key features that we liked, linking not only the project information, but also the involved parties be it awarded contractors, engineers or the developers etc. One of the important features that we use on L2B is linking companies to past projects as well as the tenders they are linked to now in order to get some history of their involvement and experience, with this tool we often know of the companies that they are dealing with and cross reference this in order to get a better feel for the future relationship that we can build with companies we are not familiar with.

Recent Projects?

We have recently completed the Fourways mall project in Johannesburg. Our involvement in City Centre One for Steyn City was crucial in assisting the contractors in keeping to their project schedule. Scribante Concrete have been fortunate to be heavily involved in the renewable energy projects including wind farms in South Africa and largely involved with multiple RDP housing, Social housing and military vet projects which have helped many South Africans into a safe home.

Favourite thing about the Construction Industry?

It's a great feeling driving past an area that was previously bush or Greenfields and seeing how our involvement has helped shaped the land into what it is today, be it, an Airport / Water Park / 20 Storey Hotel or Cancer research centre.
